

Management of Cold Intolerance

The management of cold intolerance is largely symptomatic and may include:

- Multiple layers of clothing – especially when placed on the affected extremities first and then on the rest of the body;
- Massage (toward the heart); and
- Short term use of local heat (20 minutes or less) – special care must be taken when using heat by any person with diminished sensation or peripheral vascular disease.