

Additional reporting requirements

As well as reporting on activities which directly improve health outcomes for Queenslanders, Queensland Health also reports on a number of statutory and operational functions and matters of community importance and interest.

These include:

- statutory authorities administered by the Minister for Health, and costs associated with those bodies
- legislation
- district health councils
- clinical drug trials
- funded organisations
- native title
- community engagement and rural activities
- initiatives which improve quality of life for women
- multicultural initiatives
- energy efficiency and waste management
- activities and issues relating to our workforce, such as overseas travel undertaken by staff and voluntary early retirements
- consultancy expenditure

Our reports on these activities are part of our commitment to transparent, responsible and accountable government.
