

This Payslip glossary of terms is intended to help Queensland Health employees understand the terms and codes that may appear on their payslips.

The glossary has been organised into four sections to correspond with the four boxes on your payslip in which the most unfamiliar terms or codes may appear.

To view the section of the glossary relating to the relevant box on your payslip, click on the links below. Alternatively, page numbers for these sections are located on the contents page (p. 3).

- Earnings table
(the table that breaks down your hours worked, and wages and allowances earned during the current fortnight)
- Deductions box
- Employer Super Contributions box
- Leave Balances box

If the explanation column does not help you understand what the term or code relates to, you can also refer to the category column.

Each code or term is allocated a category. More detailed category descriptions have been developed to provide additional explanation on why terms or codes in that category are used.

The full list of categories is below. Click on the relevant category to see the detailed explanation. Alternatively, page numbers for these terms / code categories are located on the contents page (p.3).

Terms / code categories

Accommodation assistance

Employees who are entitled to accommodation assistance under their award entitlements will have this paid to them upon approval.

All purpose allowances

Employees receive various allowances which are entitlements based on the employees award. Some allowances are calculated in an “all purpose” way, which is to include base rate, overtime, leave loading and other general penalties.

All purpose allowances may be available to employees that belong to the following awards/occupational groups:

- Clinical Advancement
- District Health Services Award
- Higher Education Incentive
- Public Service Award

Charity deductions

Employees can request an amount of their pay is paid directly to an external agency – such as direct payment to a nominated charity or charities.

Clinical/Medical Manager allowance

Allowances that may be available to Clinical Managers and Medical Managers.

Death benefits

Benefits and termination payments that are paid to an appropriate recipient after an employee is deceased.

Employer Super Contributions

Queensland Health pays compulsory superannuation contributions on behalf of employees. By referring to the description on your payslip, you will be able to identify the amount that has been paid.

Engineering and trade award allowances

Allowances that may be available to building, engineering and maintenance employees.

Full Income Tax

Queensland Health pays compulsory income tax contributions on behalf of employees. By referring to the description on your payslip, you will be able to identify the amount of income tax contributed. An employee can elect for additional tax to be deducted above the compulsory income tax contributions.

Garnishments

Employees may be ordered by court to have an amount of their pay paid directly to an external agency – such as direct payment to cover garnishments (eg. child support payments).

Garnishments may be ongoing payments directed by a court (child support) or payments that occur until the debt is finalised (unpaid court fines).

General allowances

Employees who receive allowances specific to their award that does not fit into any other categories is classified as a general allowance.

The wage types which fall under the 'General allowances' category are outlined below:
