

Current network trainees who are clinical exam candidates

If you're sitting the clinical exam this year, you should preference advanced training positions (using preference options 1-4) anticipating that you will pass and progress to advanced training.

As a back up to your application for an advanced training position if you fail the exam, you can apply for an additional year on the network to re-attempt, providing you are eligible. You will be eligible providing you have not; failed an exam more than once or failed and then deferred.

To apply for an additional year on the network, you'll need to complete the following:

1. apply through the RMO campaign within the specified dates
2. select YES to 'Are you applying for the Queensland Basic Physician Training (Adult Medicine) Network?' in Section 8 of the RMO Campaign application
3. complete all subsequent questions indicating that you're a current network trainee
4. nominate the following as your fifth preference in Section 10 of the RMO Campaign application:
 - Facility: College/Pathway/Network Determined
 - Position: Registrar
 - Specialty: Medicine
 - Sub-specialty: Basic Physician Training

You'll be contacted in late July and asked to complete a preference survey to provide you with allocations for the following training year.

In late August, you'll receive a letter of offer that outlines your hospital allocations. If you accept the offer, you'll remain on the network. If you decline, you'll exit the network and you'll need to secure a position suitable for re-attempting the exam. Those still on the network will get priority access to exam preparation resources.
