Did you know: HIV is still here – and it’s on the move?

Compassion, knowledge and action are the strongest weapons we have in the fight against HIV.

That’s the message Sunshine Coast Hospital and Health Service’s (SCHHS) Director of Sexual Health and HIV Services (Clinic 87), Dr Kuong Taing, is sending to promote this year’s World AIDS Day (1 December).

Dr Taing said the aim was to encourage people to talk about HIV, to remind the community that the HIV epidemic was still a major health issue in Queensland, and to break down barriers and educate the community.

“The national theme for World AIDS Day 2016 in Australia is ‘HIV is still here – and it’s on the move’. We encourage you to show your support and wear a red ribbon, talk to your friends and work colleagues about HIV or make a donation to a HIV charity,” Dr Taing said.

Clinic 87 is marking World AIDS Day with a stand in the Nambour General Hospital foyer on Thursday, 1 December 2016 to promote community awareness and provide information on HIV and sexual health.

“People are invited to come along on Thursday, chat with us about HIV and what services we offer at the Sunshine Coast Sexual Health and HIV Service (Clinic 87),” Dr Taing said.

“We offer rapid HIV testing at Clinic 87, which is a simple finger prick test that will give your result in only 20 minutes. If reactive, a confirmatory test will then be sent to the laboratory. You no longer have to wait up to a week for a HIV result,” he said.

Health experts say about 25 per cent of those infected with HIV today are unaware of their status. Thanks to recent advances in HIV treatments and testing technologies, there are increased opportunities to virtually eliminate HIV transmission in Queensland by the end of the decade.
