Rugby	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Relocating to Queensland today

Public concerns :

- Appearance of lack of consistency and decision making
- Favouritism to sports stars
- Pressure applied by codes for immediate consideration

Principles for our decision making:

The very reason clubs want to relocate to Qld, is the reason we need to take a firm stance:

- Continue to keep Queenslanders safe
- No special treatment
- No costs to Queensland taxpayer
- Cost of displacement to be worn by the Code

For exemptions, the following applications will be prioritised:

- compassionate grounds
- genuine reasons that support Queensland jobs

RELOCATION OF SPORTING CODES TO QUEENSLAND

Overlay:

A number of sporting codes are at critical points in their seasons and trying to keep the season alive through relocating from COVID hotspots to other states with eased restrictions.

The NRL on July 14 announced that it would relocate all teams. The exemption and relocation has led to negative public perception after a wedding and a domestic violence conference were displaced.

Current situation

The NRL is now seeking to relocate approximately 529 family members to Queensland (many have been in declared NSW hotspots).

The public health approach applied by Queensland Health would be that they need to be:

- individually processed
- Source an exclusive use of hotel
- Ensure vaccination of all hotel staff
- Submit a proposal for consideration and approval by Queensland Health

Key principles/actions that need to be applied as part of the response:

- A full plan (alternative quarantine arrangement) needs to be submitted to Queensland Health. That has yet to occur.
- When that has happened, due to the large number applicants, Queensland Health will need adequate time to process the applications in a way that does not divert urgent resources away from other priority cases such as compassionate exemptions and essential workers
- The onus will be in on the NRL to ensure that the plan is enacted fully – including ensuring all staff are vaccinated.
- In addition, there must be an assurance that other parties (eg people who have already booked rooms) are not being adversely impacted.

AFL

As of Thursday morning July 15, the AFL is seeking to relocate 8 teams and a number of family members (more than 136 members at last count)

The situation is rapidly evolving however Melbourne has yet to be a declared hotspot by Queensland as at 2.30pm July 15.

Melbourne will go into a snap lockdown for 3-5 days from midnight July 15. Discussions are ongoing with the AFL and the response will be dependent on timing.
