Beds

Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed A bed is available, if (on the last Friday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Friday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Beds

Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed A bed is 'available', if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed. A bed is 'temporarily unavailable', if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives

Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is 'temporarily unavailable' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is 'temporarily unavailable' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives

Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is available, if (on the last Friday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Friday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Beds
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed A bed is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed A bed is 'temporarily unavailable' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Beds
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed A bed is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Beds
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed A bed is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives

Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is 'temporarily unavailable' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed A bed is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Beds
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed A bed is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed A bed is temporarily unavailable if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Beds
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed A bed is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives
 Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Bed Alternatives

Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed Alternative A bed alternative is 'available' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed Alternative A bed is 'temporarily unavailable' if (on the last Wednesday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.

Beds

Definitions (refer to current MAC Manual for more information): Available Bed A bed is available, if (on the last Friday of the reference month) it is immediately available for use by an admitted patient. The bed must be located in a suitable place for patient care, and there are nursing and auxiliary staff available, or who could be made available within a reasonable period (within 24 hours), to service patients who might occupy them. Temporarily Unavailable Bed A bed is temporarily unavailable, if (on the last Friday of the reference month) it is NOT immediately available for use because of renovations, strikes, staff shortages etc, and there is a planned date for making the bed available. A bed that is not available for use and there is no planned date for making it available for use, is a 'closed' bed and it is NOT to be reported on MAC.
