DATA AREA	Term	Definition / explanation
Acronym	ENT	Ear, Nose and Throat specialty
Waiting lists for specialist appointments	WL or Waitlist	Patients in need of a specialist appointment are often referred for treatment to the nearest hospital or clinic that has available resources to manage the condition. Once the referral is accepted by the hospital or clinic, the specialist will prioritise the patient's need for consultation and allocate the patient an urgency category (1 to 3), where 1 is most urgent and 3 is least urgent. The patient will then be placed on a waiting list for their initial appointment. The time a patient waits may depend on the demand for each specialty and the urgency of their symptoms or health condition.
Waiting lists for specialist appointments	Total Waitlist	Included in data extract, represents the total waitlist regardless of the patient's care status. This includes the Ready for Care (RFC) and Not Ready for Care (NRFC) classifications recorded at time of census.
Waiting lists for specialist appointments	RFC Waitlist	Included in data extract, represents the Ready for Care component of the waitlist as recorded at census.
Removals from the waitlist	Removals	Removals from the waitlist are not recorded as a part of the data collection and cannot be supplied as a metric. "Removals" recorded represent only the initial service events (ISE) or appointments. Other removals are not captured in the collection.
Specialist appointments held	Initial Service Events (ISE)	An initial specialist appointment (sometimes called an initial service event) is the first appointment a patient has with a specialist doctor or surgeon in an outpatient clinic or hospital, for treatment or management of the condition for which they have been referred. When a patient has had their initial service event, they are removed from the specialist appointment waiting list.

DATA NUANCES	Item	Definition / explanation
Waiting lists for specialist appointments	Census date	Monthly waitlist position is captured immediately following the end of the reporting month, recognised with a census date as the first day of the month immediate following the report month. For example, October 2025 report month waitlist is reported "...as at 1 November 2025"
Waiting lists for specialist appointments	Analysis	Waitlist is reported as at census, ie reported at a point in time. Comparison to other periods can be made, however waitlist position cannot be cumulative. i.e. September waitlist should not be added to October waitlist
Specialist appointments held	ISE Seen in time	This measure reports the proportion for each urgency category. Data provided is by month and is precalculated for in-month performance levels. Do not collate or add results.
Specialist appointments held	Median Wait Time (Days)	Statistical value precalculated to provide the in-month performance when by 50% of provided ISEs were seen. Comparison to other periods can be made, however median performance cannot be cumulative. i.e. September median should not be added to October median.
Specialist appointments held	90th % Wait Time (Days)	Statistical value precalculated to provide the in-month performance when by 90% of provided ISEs were seen. Comparison to other periods can be made, however percentile performance cannot be cumulative. i.e. September 90th percentile should not be added to October 90th percentile.
