SOA Products

- Containment Aids

When Selecting a Continence Aid, Consider:

- Type of loss (urine and/or faecal)
- Type of aid – e.g. containment/conduction
- Total capacity versus working capacity
- Size of the aid
- The client's expectations/lifestyle
- Skin integrity
- The client's ability to manage the aid
- Environmental needs
- Carer needs

Remember: MASS has a no exchange policy.
Incorrect prescriptions go back to the prescriber!

Disposable Continence Aids - Hints

- Aids range from light to moderate and heavy absorbency
- Pad weighing is helpful and as a guide 50g = 50mls of urine
- Bladder diary is useful due to leakage being different at different times of the day
- How does client report leakage? Dribble, quick gush, or flood; amount of pad changes; skin problems
- MASS products are Total Capacity in mls not working capacity. ISO 11948-1 / Rothwell test is the main international standard
- Always trial the aid

How are Disposable Aids Designed

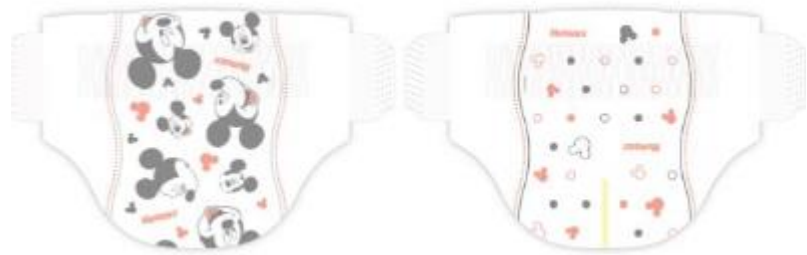

- Top layer – Porous, soft and breathable
- Middle layers – Fluff made of paper fibers and SAP (super absorbent polymers)
- Fluff absorbs up to x10 times its own weight and helps the moisture spread across the full pad
- SAP can hold up to x30 times its own weight and is a highly absorbent powder that turns fluid into gel
- Leakage guards or barriers
- Adhesive backing – will need firm fitting underwear
- Wetness indicators – change when indicator is 2/3rds
